However, we would be negligent if we did not acknowledge the fact that there is also concerning content that both families and youth need to know about from an emotional, psychological, physical, social, and cognitive standpoint. In this program, we will talk about four categories of major concerns that both parents and youth should be alive to, and how families can talk about these concerns in an enlightening and nonfrightening way. Knowledge and the understanding and application of that knowledge is power for both parents and youth, to help all make the online experience safer!"

A New Documentary MMIWG Crisis: MURDER IN BIG HORN

"Indigenous women and girls have been disappearing and showing up murdered across the American west for generations. Now, a new series on Showtime called Murder in Big Horn pulls back the curtain on the tragedy, examining a slew of murders and disappearances in Montana.

While the U.S. may be behind Canada in awareness of the violence against Indigenous women and girls, they have been more proactive in actually doing something with task forces set up around the country under the banner of Lady Justice." (Brad Marsh, Toronto Sun)

"Directors Razelle Benally and Matthew Galkin craft a powerful portrait of tribal members and their communities within Big Horn County, Montana battling an epidemic of Missing and Murdered Indigenous Women (MMIW) that has been prevalent since colonization.

The three-part docuseries examines the circumstances surrounding many of these cases, told solely through the perspectives of those involved: Native families, Native journalists, and local law enforcement officers. All three episodes are now streaming."

"When three bodies are discovered in Big Horn County, Montana, an area known as "the most dangerous place in the country" for Native American women, local authorities first ignore each death before ruling them accidental – leaving the victims' loved ones to deal both with their loss and the indifference of local law enforcement. As sorrow turns to outrage, however, a vibrant and fearless movement is formed to search for the truth and bring attention to the epidemic of missing or murdered cases among Native peoples in the US." WORKSHOP:
HURT CHILDREN,

Wednesday March 8
9:30am-12:30 noon PST

Special Guest Speaker: Andrea Chatwin
(MA, CCC): Founder and Clinical Director of A Child's Song <https://achildssong.ca/>

Parenting a child who has experienced early trauma can be confusing, and often, very challenging. Parents may find themselves feeling manipulated, rejected, or victimized by their child's behavior and question their ability to respond effectively. When parents are triggered by their child's behavior, they often find themselves responding in ways that are uncharacteristic – leaving everyone confused and emotionally charged. Parents will learn new responses that create safety for themselves and their children. They will also build their understanding of effective therapeutic interventions. Parents will take away hope that healing is possible – no matter the circumstances. This workshop is for: Adoptive / Permanency / Foster Parents, Waiting Adoptive / Permanency Parents and Professionals who work with these families.
